Employment Opening

The University of Chicago’s Department of Neurology is seeking a full-time faculty member to serve as a neurologist clinician and educator. Responsibilities include primarily maintaining an active outpatient sleep clinic, reading polysomnograms, and scheduled general neurology coverage of inpatient services. Ability to apply other skills in the discipline and practice of neurology is also welcome. Teaching and supervision of fellows, residents, and medical students is expected. In addition to 80% clinical effort, a physician in this position may also participate in various research activities including clinical trials.

Prior to the start of employment, the successful candidate must: 1) have an MD, DO, or equivalent degree; 2) hold or be eligible for permanent state of Illinois medical licensure; 3) be board eligible/certified in sleep medicine; and 4) be board eligible/certified in neurology. Preference will be given to those with relevant experience post-fellowship.

To be considered, those interested must apply online at the University of Chicago’s Academic Career Opportunities website at http://tinyurl.com/z6bdla8 by uploading a curriculum vitae and cover letter. Academic rank and compensation are dependent upon qualifications; the position includes a generous benefits package. Review of applications will continue until the position is filled.
